New Jersey has spawned some pretty great musicians over the years: Bon Jovi, Yo La Tengo and, of course, Bruce Springsteen And The E Street Band. This weekend Springsteen will do his part to even further foster the New Jersey music scene by helping out one of the local school bands.

This weekend The Boss will play three shows at Asbury Park, NJ's Convention Hall, with a portion of the proceeds going to the Asbury Park High School band. The money will be used to buy uniforms and instruments for the band, which involves 25 students from the school.

The members of the marching band will also all receive free tickets to one of the shows — not an easy commodity to come by. According to the Associated Press, Springsteen will also allow the band members to set up a collection table at the shows to raise even more money.

In other Springsteen news, The Boss was just nominated for a Grammy for a performance with the new Warren Zevon. Springsteen and Zevon are nominated in the Best Rock Performance By A Group Or category for their collaboration on the song "Disorder In The House." The song appears on Zevon's Wind, which was recorded shortly before the musician lost his battle with cancer.
